

84000 launches new state-of-the-art Reading Room with 10 newly translated Buddhist texts

[New York, NY, USA]: 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha is pleased to announce its newly updated Reading Room and the publication of ten newly translated Tibetan Buddhist texts.

New online Reading Room (read.84000.co): The upgraded state-of-the-art platform is first-of-its-kind and features fully responsive and mobile-friendly interfaces as well as easily navigable and searchable content. The Reading Room is compatible with the Text Encoding Initiative (TEI), an international standard used by libraries, museums, publishers and scholars to encode digital texts and to systematically compile important textual information.

“This new Reading Room ensures that these translations will be easily accessible and will enable practitioners and scholars alike to remember and study the words of the Buddha,” said Huang Jing Rui, 84000 Executive Director.

The goal of 84000 is to translate 70,000 pages of the Kangyur in 25 years and 161,800 pages of the Tengyur in 100 years. In just six years, 84000 is supporting 38 teams of 201 translators from around the world, including both Tibetan scholars and Western academics. These teams are currently working on the translation of more than 23,000 pages, amounting to one-third of the entire Kangyur. To date, the Reading Room has published 29 texts, received close to 8 million views, and been visited by more than 138,000 people from 238 countries.

84000 is a major undertaking to build upon and further the remarkable efforts of past renowned translators and Dharma patrons (such as Trisong Deutsen, Ashoka, Wu Zetian and Xuanzang), without whom the words of the Buddha may not have been available today. “By translating and making available the Tibetan Buddhist texts to modern people, a vast swath of Buddhist civilization and culture may be saved from annihilation.” says Dzongsar Khyentse Rinpoche.

This is a rare and exciting opportunity to join a historic movement in its earliest stages. To learn more and get involved, please browse the Reading Room, subscribe to our mailing list, or sponsor a page of translation.
